

“The purpose of the Marion Control Unit is to control revolutionary attitudes in the prison system and in the society at large.”

-from Warden Ralph Arons testimony in federal court

Unlock the Box is a movie documenting the struggle to put an end to long-term isolation in u.s. prisons that has been waged by prisoners and activists for decades. Starting from the premise that long-term isolation is a form of torture that serves no purpose except the state's oppressive aims at social control, Unlock the Box documents the many forms of struggle that this movement has taken over the years.

Each narrative is highlighted by the voices and artwork of current and former prisoners who have done time in control units. Also featured, is new research on the growth and extent of the use of long-term isolation in the united States. Throughout the movie there is a focus on lessons from struggle and analysis of the relationship between the prison movement and the global effort to put an end to imperialism in all its forms. The desired purpose of the movie is to continue to bring the realities of the torture going on in these prisons to a broader audience and to help create greater clarity on what needs to be done to replace a system of torture with a system that works in the interests of humynity.

www.abolishcontrolunits.org

DVD VIDEO NTSC

114 minutes • 2008 • color • stereo

*intellectual property is one means of exploitation under imperialism

UNLOCK THE BOX DOCUMENTING THE STRUGGLE TO SHUT DOWN PRISON CONTROL UNITS

Reel Soldier Productions presents:

UNLOCK THE BOX

DOCUMENTING THE STRUGGLE TO SHUT DOWN PRISON CONTROL UNITS

